NATURE'S ARCANUM.

IT IS REVEALED BY HOWLAND'S WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

An Invention by Which Hidden Wealth May Be Unearthed and Ledges of the Precious Metals Traced to Their Abiding Places.

S. W. Howland is one of those practical mineralogists who neglect no means by which the treasures of the earth may be made to manifest themselves to the mundane seekers after affluence.

He is a resident of this city at the present time, and for many years past has been working on an invention which, if his story is correct, will revolutionize prospecting for the precious metals.

Mr. Howland was the original locator of the gold mine near Fort Brown, on the Cleveland place, five miles from this city, and according to statements made by those who were interested in the development of that now abandoned claim, every assertion he made to the promoters of the enterprise has been proven by subsequent discoveries.

Howland is a man aged about 60 years. During the long period in which he has been engaged in prospecting he has studied the electrical affinity between ledges of precious metals and the magnetic needle, and has arrived at the conclusion that no matter how strenuously scientists may deny its existence there is an affinity which must necessarily disclose itself under proper conditions.

Imbued with this idea, he claims to have invented an apparatus which will invariably locate a leage containing either gold or silver, or which will indicate with mechanical exactitude the place of deposit of precious metals.

The apparatus invented by Mr. Howland, and which he will be pleased to show to those of his friends who are interested in his discoveries, consists of a Y-shaped piece of metal, the base of which is composed of brass. The instrument is about six inches long and four broad. The points are of iron, but the hollow covering between the points of the Y is of brass. Between the upper and the lower sheets of brass is a magnetic needle.

This needle, so cunningly concealed between the two layers of brass, does the work.

At the delta of the Y two wooden sticks are inserted, and the proprietor grasps these in his hands. He then travels over a ridge in which he imagines minerals to be concealed. Like a witch-hazel, when a ridge containing mineral is approached, the apparatus turns down in the hands of the holder, and points out the exact location of the mineral belt.

Mr. Howland is one of those who do not wish to hide their light under a bushel. He says his invention will do all he claims for it and mentions mines now being worked profitably which were discovered by him with his little machine.

THE RAILROAD CASE.

Foster and Markham's Position Definitely Upheld.

According to a decision handed down by the supreme court Friday last, the organization of the San Francisco and North Pacific railway is likely to remain intact for two or three years to come, and the proposed consolidation of that road with the North Pacific Coast railway, which has been the cause of an immense amount of litigation in two counties, is now made impossible, while the contract between Sidney V. Smith, A. W. Foster and Andrew Markham remains in force.

The opinion handed down by the supreme court Friday was in the case of Sidney V. Smith vs. A. W. Foster, appealed by Foster from the decision of Judge Seawell of the superior court. The fight between the stockholders of the San Francisco and North Pacific is of a year's standing. When the 42,000 shares of railroad stock belonging to the Donahue estate were sold by Judge Angelotti of Marin county to a syndicate composed of Sidney V. Smith, A. W. Foster and Andrew Markham, those three gentlemen entered into a contract to vote the stock as a unit in the election of directors for a period of five years. A year ago Smith attempted to withdraw from the contract and vote his stock in favor of a consolidation with the North Pacific Coast railway, but at the annual election was prevented from doing so by President A. W. Foster.

After some litigation in Marin county suit was commenced by Smith in the superior court of San Francisco to declare void the election in question. It was shown in the trial of the case before Judge Seawell that President Foster had prevented the voting of 8000 shares of stock held in New York and represented at the stockholders' meeting by Anton Borel, on the ground that the holders of the same were not bona fide stockholders, and it was also shown that Sidney V. Smith had been prevented from voting his 13,000 of the 42,000 shares of stock held by the three parties to the agreement mentioned. This action on the part of President Foster prevented the election of Smith as a director in the company.

In its decision Friday last the supreme court upheld President Foster on both points, taking the view that the New York parties who held the 8000 shares represented by Borel were not bona fide stockholders, and holding in respect to the contract between Smith, Foster and Markham that it was legal and binding until it expires by limitation. This decision is a victory for Foster and Markham, and is calculated to upset the plans of Smith and the stockholders of the North Pacific Coast railway to effect a consolidation of the two companies, at least for the present.

The supreme court also settled the case involving similar points on appeal from Judge Angelott's court. The court held that the case had become of no consequence, and so dismissed the appeal.

Learned Away From Home.

An important move was made week before last in the development of the large redwood timber belt of Ornbaun valley, near Yorkville, Mendocino county, about twenty miles from Cloverdale. From a rough estimate it is thought there are 100,000,000 feet of standing timber available. August Wherspon, a wellknown mill man of Guerneville, has contracted, says the Blue Lakes Advocate, to purchase the stumpage from John S. Ornbaun, the owner of the tract, and he has already begun tearing down his mill near Guerneville, to be set up again at the site for the new plant, with additional machinery to be added to increase the capacity of the mill to 30,000 feet per day. Ornbaun valley is on the headwaters of the Garcia river, and the hills are low, with few deep canyons, thus affording great convenience in logging. The land, in fact, is perfectly adapted for a sawmill site. It is stated that the expense of manfacturing the lumber from the standing timber in the forest to the yard will be less than one-half of that necessary at Guerneville.

Reports of Deaths.

Reports from 51 cities, towns, villages, and sanitary districts, aggregating a population of 744,280, shows a morality of 1075—a death rate of 1.44 per 1000 for December, or 17.28 per 1000 per annum. There were 181 deaths from consumption, 91 from pneumonia, 26 from bronchitis, 7 from congestion of the lungs, 3 from diarrhœa and dysentery, 5 from cholera infantum, 63 from other diseases of the stomach and bowels, 24 from diphtheria, 5 from croup, 1 from measles, 2 from whooping cough, 23 from typhoid fever, 6 from malarial fevers, 5 from cerebro-spinal fevers, 47 from cancer, three from erysipelas, 117 from diseases of the heart, 2 from alcoholism, 463 from all other causes, 2 of which were from la grippe. Reports of prevailing diseases from 25 localities outside of the larger cities and towns give 99 cases of pneumonia, 124 of bronchitis, 17 of pleurisy, 22 of congestion of the lungs, 50 of diarrhœa, 17 of dysentery, 4 of cholera morbus, 2 of cholera infantum, 37 of croup, 4 of scarlatina, 152 of measles, 36 of whooping cough, 197 of la grippe, 11 of typhoid fever, 99 of malarial fevers, 4 of cerebro-spinal fevers, 10 of erysipelas, 89 of rheumatism, 76 of neuralgia, 46 of tonsilitis, and 56 of pharyngitis. THE DEADLY BULLET

ROUND VALLEY AGAIN THE SCENE OF HOMICIDE.

Jeremiah Hulett Shoots and Instantly Kills John Kinney—The Culmination of Many Previous Quarrels—Joel Eveland Holds an Inquest on the Remains.

COVELO, January 18.—On Tuesday, the 12th inst, Jeremiah M. Hulett shot John Kinney, killing him instantly. The deceased resided on what is known as the Fitz range, about 20 miles east of this city, and Hulett also resides on the same range. They have had considerable trouble at different times.

Last election day Kinney accused Hulett of giving information that caused his vote to be challenged. Kinney hunted Hulett up and used language that the latter objected to, and he emphasized his resentment by knocking Kinney down. Kinney got up with his pistol in his hand, but the bystanders prevented further trouble at that time.

Mr. Kinney is said to have been very contumacious, worrying and otherwise injuring—even to the extent of killing—other people's stock which chanced to stray onto his claim.

On the day of the homicide Hulett, hearing Kinney's dog worrying stock, sent his son George to see what occasioned the uproar. The boy being gone longer than he thought needful, Hulett went himself to investigate the trouble. When he arrived on the scene, Kinney was talking to George Hulett in an abusive and hostile manner. Hulett objected to Kinney's language, whereupon Kinney turned to him and said: "Perhaps you want some of it," or words to that effect. At the same time Kinney commenced to handle his gun (a Winchester) in a very threatening manner. Hulett then drew his pistol and shot him. One shot did the business. Hulett came to town and gave himself up to the officers.

Joel Eveland, justice of the peace and acting coroner, empaneled a jury and held an inquest. The verdict of the jury was "that John Kinney came to his death from the effects of a bullet wound, fired from a pistol held in the hand of Jeremiah Hulett."

SAVED BY A SCRATCH

YOUNG DODGE NARROWLY ESCAPES HANGING.

The Usal Assassin Found Guilty of Murder in the First Degree but the Jury Recommends Imprisonment for Life as the Punishment.

The trial of John Dodge for the murder of John Mudgett was concluded Friday afternoon last, and at 5 o'clock the case was given to the jury.

After deliberating over five hours the jury brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree and imposed a penalty of life imprisonment.

It is understood that on the first ballot the jury stood ten for the extreme penalty, one for life imprisonment and one for murder in the second degree. The matter was then compromised as stated.

Throughout the trial young Dodge displayed no evidences of perturbation. The horrifying recital of his brutal crime caused no visible indication of either pity or remorse.

As soon as the jury had handed in its verdict the district attorney moved for the dismissal of the charge against Ida Dodge, accused as accessory after the fact. Judge Mannon granted the request on the showing that there was not evidence sufficient to convict.

Monday next was the day fixed for pronouncing judgment.

The newspapers of the state are commenting adversely on the attitude of the juryman who saved the neck of the heartless assassin of John Mudgett. There can be no question regarding the leniency of the verdict. If a criminal ever yet deserved the extreme penalty of the law it is John Dodge.

The murder of Mudgett was not the first crime committed by this vagrant halfbreed. According to stories told by those who know him well, the life of young Dodge has been one long attempt at living without work by preying upon his neighbors.

Chandler Smith, one of the witnesses in the Mudgett case, tells of a visit he made to the home of the murdered stockman some days before the crime was committed. On that occasion he remained over night at the Mudgett cabin, and was aroused during the night by the barking of his dog. From the action of the animal Smith knew that the brute's rage was due to the presence of a human being.

After Smith left the Mudgett cabin the following day he met young Dodge, and in the conversation which ensued Dodge told him that he had been at Mudgett's cabin the night before, and detailed the conversation he had overheard between Smith and Mudgett. The barking of a strange dog had evidently warned young Dodge that Mudgett had company, and thus the life of the latter had been spared a few days longer.

There can be no question but that Dodge had gone to Mudgett's house that night to kill him.

Some years ago Dodge killed a young fellow in Humboldt county. He was acquitted on the ground that the killing had been accidental, but many neighbors then believed that the young halfbreed had wantonly slain his companion.

The case for Dodge was conducted by J. W. Johnston, and it would have been better for the people had a less able attorney been employed.

THEY WANT THE EARTH.

Woolen Mill Proprietors Desire to Locate Near This City.

The establishment of a woolen mill in this city would be an enterprise well worth encouraging, but THE PRESS is doubtful if the people would entertain a proposition such as the one submitted below:

A site of from five to ten acres of level land must be donated, the same to be close to the railroad and in a locality where clear and pure water can be had the year round without cost. The water is necessary for steam, wool-washing, etc. The site must be also where labor can be engaged at reasonable wages; only white men and women to be employed. Cheap fuel is one of the leading necessities, and no less than 75 to 100 cords of wood would be purchased per month by the company. The promoters demand that the people of this valley furnish them gratis the necessary lumber for the buildings, estimated at 250,000 feet, and a cash bonus, the amount of which is to be left to the people's generosity.

The Superior Court.

The case of the people against Charles Stanford, accused of an unspeakable crime, occupied the superior court for the major portion of the week. The case was tried with closed doors and the jury, after deliberating half an hour, returned a verdict of not guilty Wednesday afternoon.

In the matter of the Angle estate, the application for a family allowance was continued.

The present term of court came to a close yesterday morning. Judge Mannon will pronounce judgment on John Dodge Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

The Santa Rosa high school students have invited the high schools of Ukiah, Healdsburg, Petaluma and Sonoma valley to each elect a delegate to meet in Santa Rosa during the first part of February for the purpose of arranging a field day. A MODERN GOLGOTHA

GHASTLY EVIDENCES OF A STARTLING CRIME.

The Crumbling Remains of a Man Unearthed on the Bank of Russian River. A Possible Solution of the Mystery—An Inquest Held.

Sunday afternoon last two young sons of J. B. Hoss, who resides near this city, were out enjoying themselves fishing in Russian river. While passing a point on the McGarvey ranch, below the asylum bridge, the attention of the youthful fishermen was attracted to a human arm which they discovered protruding from a sand bank near the margin of the stream.

The boys notified the proper authorities and late Sunday night the remains of the hastily buried man were brought to this city and deposited in the undertaking-rooms of Cook Brothers.

Monday morning Coroner Barker summoned a jury consisting of W. W. Porterfield, George Whitehorn, Rufus Lucas, J. S. Thomason, John Orr, W. H. Lyon and Frank Weger, and an inquest was held upon the body.

The body on which the inquest was held hardly bore the semblance to a human being. It was almost completely denuded of flesh, shreds of tissue alone holding the bones together.

From the testimony adduced from Dr. Stout, the physician who made the autopsy, it was evident that the cadaver had been lying in the dank sand four or five months at the time it was discovered. The skull had evidently been crushed by a blunt instrument—probably the back of an ax or hatchet.

The body was encased in an overshirt and a pair of overalls, in the pocket of which was found a 25-cent silver piece. The garments had been nearly destroyed by the elements.

After viewing the remains the jury decided that the body was that of an unknown man who had come to his death from violence at the hands of parties unknown.

As is usual in cases such as these there were many theories advanced in regard to the death of the person on whose remains the inquest was held.

W. W. Fisher, who lives near thescene of the exhumation, believes the body to have been that of a man named George Hight, a friend of his whose disappearance some months ago has not yet been accounted for.

Fisher says that Hight was a resident of Mendocino, who made periodical trips to this city as a peddler of shellfish. Hight had been divorced from his wife some months ago, and the lady was now a resident of Blocksburg.

Fisher lives on the J. P. Hoffman place, and says that some months since Hight told Portuguese Frank, who lives across the river, that he was going to Cloverdale to secure a bill of goods, which he was going to peddle around the valley. Since Hight's departure nothing has been heard from him by Fisher, who was an intimate friend. Consequently Fisher thinks that the body found may be that of his friend Hight, whom he believes to have been killed and robbed.

The most probable theory regarding the tragedy is the one advanced by J. R. Jones. Mr. Jones is a miner, and was employed for some time on the Edwards brothers' copper claim on Red Mountain.

"About the first of September last," says Mr. Jones. "I was working on the Edwards brothers' claim on Red Mountain. I had occasion to come to town on matters connected with the mine, and passed close to the place where the body recently unearthed was discovered. I saw, encamped near the spot where the body was found by the Hoss boys, a woman aged about fifty, a girl of perhaps eighteen, and a man of about sixty years of age.

"The parties were strangers in this portion of the country, and engaged me in conversation. The rig they came in was dilapidated, and it looked as though they were all in extremis, as far as support was concerned. The elder woman was strong and healthy, but the old gentleman was sitting down and I had no opportunity to observe him carefully. The elderly woman cast frequent glances at the old man, and told me that he was no good; that she and the young girl were forced to support him, and that they were tired of it.

"When I heard of the recent tragedy it at once occurred to me that probably the two women had taken the opportunity of putting the old man out of the way."

Do You Want to Stop Drinking?

Inquired a young gentleman of a friend who had long been addicted to the liquor habit. "I certainly do," replied his friend. "Why do you ask?" "Because, if you do why don't you stop?" "That's easier said than done," responded the other. "I have tried time and again, but it's no go. I can't withstand the temptation. It's utterly impossible for me to resist. I don't possess the will power you did when you quit." "There was no exhibition of will power on my part," replied the other. "I found it as useless as yourself to resist the temptation; but I wanted to stop, so I experimented with the Fittz Alcohol Cure. It's easy to take: it builds up the system, and after the first five days the desire all leaves you. Consult Dr. G. W. Stout."

The body of a man supposed to be "Bat" Sheedy, a Chicago pugilist, has just been found in the mud on the shore of the Hutchinson river, near the tracks of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, New York. It is reported that Sheedy was walking across the trestle on his way to New York when set upon by thieves, knocked senseless with a coupling pin, robbed of his valuables and thrown into the mud ten feet below.

President-elect McKinley has written to his army friend and former neighbor, George Stanton of Glendora, Cal., thanking him for a box of naval oranges sent three weeks ago. "It is the hope of Mrs. McKinley and myself," said Major Mckinley in the letter, "that some day we may come and see where these oranges grow. Neither of us has ever experienced the delight of a winter in the semi-tropics, but we have made many plans to do so some day."

Miss Ellen Gretchell, residing in Humboldt county, will lose one of her eyes as the result of an accident. The young lady had asked her brother to hand her a pair of scissors, and he complied by playfully tossing them to her. She made an effort to catch them but failed, and the point of one of the blades struck her in the eye, destroying the sight.

Judge McKenna of San Francisco called on President-elect McKinley last week, presumably in response to a special invitation. This is regarded as an indication that the Pacific coast is to have one member in the next cabinet.

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, as it exerts so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the vitality necessary to insure their health. The pneumogastric nerve, as shown here, may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system, as it supplies the heart, lungs, stomach, bowels, etc., with the nerve force necessary to keep them active and healthy. As will be seen by the cut the long nerve descending from the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels is the pneumogastric, while the numerous little branches supply the heart, lungs and stomach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way disordered by irritability or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs receiving the diminished supply are consequently weakened.

Physicians generally fail to recognize the importance of this fact, but treat the organ itself instead of the cause of the trouble. The noted specialist, Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the principal discoveries concerning it are due to his efforts.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the unrivaled brain and nerve food, is prepared on the principle that all nervous and many other difficulties originate from disorders of the nerve centers. Its wonderful success in curing these disorders is testified to by thousands in every part of the land.

Restorative Nervine cures sleeplessness, nervous prostration, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs. It is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

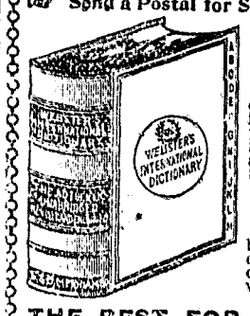
Webster's International Dictionary

The One Great Standard Authority,
So writes Hon. D. J. Brewer, Justice U. S. Supreme Court.

☞Send a Postal for Specimen Pages, etc.



Successor of the "Unabridged."

Standard of the U. S. Gov't Printing Office, the U. S. Supreme Court, all the State Supreme Courts, and of nearly all the Schoolbooks.

Warmly Commended by State Superintendents of Schools, and other Educators almost without number.

THE BEST FOR EVERYBODY
BECAUSE
It is easy to find the word wanted.
It is easy to ascertain the pronunciation.
It is easy to trace the growth of a word.
It is easy to learn what a word means.

The Detroit Free Press says:—
The Unabridged has long been the standard among those making constant use of a dictionary. The International is our old friend and standby revised and expanded to meet the demands of our growing language and advancing civilization. * * The whole has been made to reflect the scientific thought of the day, the purest and best usages of the language that now encircles the globe.—Nov. 11, 1895.

The Chicago Times-Herald says:—
Webster's International Dictionary in its present form is absolutely [illegible] to everything pertaining to our language, the way of orthography, orthoepy, etymology, definition, etc. From it there is no appeal. It is [illegible] Common Schools and Scholarship [illegible] 11, 1895.
